WEATHER—Occasional showers tonight and Thursday.

It may yet develop that Harry Orchard is a Pittsburg.

American troops have succeeded in pacifying the Filipinos again.

The peaceable Central American is very much like the good Indian.

Harry Orchard says he has "got religion." Well! It's about time.

Manager Drumm must have had the Lime Burners jumping, "Pepper, salt, mustard, vinegar."

The administration has its dates mixed. It is fighting the ice trust in winter and the coal trust in summer.

William A. Corey is negotiating for a castle in Ireland. Mrs. Corey will doubtless become a firm advocate of home rule.

The powder trust must be careful that no leaks occur during the time of the threatened attack by the administration.

Japanese politicians must have heard about the tariff war in the United States and decided they must kick up some kind of war talk.

It matters little what the nature of the news from Central America may be, it is a safe bet that it will develop into war despatches before a week.

An Indian lass is reported to have bewitched Edward Ward Vanderbilt. How appropriate that this should be made known on the anniversary of John Smith's romance with a copper-skinned dame.

Stuyvesant Fish's declaration that because of adverse legislation the railroads would stop building, seems to have been just in time to influence Governor Hughes' action on the two-cent fare bill.

GOVERNOR HUGHES AND HIS VETO.

Governor Hughes, of New York, made a most unusual and unexpected move Tuesday when he refused to sign the two-cent fare bill which had been passed by the house and senate, and by vetoing it he practically placed himself out of the race for the republican nomination for president. The action is more unusual and remarkable because of the wave of railroad legislation which has been sweeping over the country and gaining momentum as it went. Ohio was the first to adopt a flat two-cent rate. Other states have been taking up the question and a number have adopted a similar measure, and Governor Hughes is the first governor who has had the courage to veto a two-cent fare bill when it was presented to him. Governor Hughes gives as reasons for his act, arbitrary legislation and injustice to the railroads. He admits that the public have been imposed upon by the railroads, but declares that this is no excuse for the legislature perpetrating a greater evil by persecuting the railroads. The most peculiar thing in connection with the objection by Governor Hughes that the operation of a two-cent fare law would work an injustice upon the railroads is that he should apply it in New York state. In a state which is thinly populated and where there is consequently not much passenger traffic, the objection of the New York governor might apply, but in a state like New York, which is densely populated and where passenger traffic is very heavy, the objection seems out of place. The objection of arbitrary legislation is a rebuke to the legislators and governors of all states where two-cent fare laws have been made operative. If it be arbitrary legislation in New York, it is arbitrary legislation in Ohio, and Governor Hughes has set himself up as a critic, who censures Ohio and her laws.

The political significance which Governor Hughes' stand has is apparent. It is true that he has made himself solid with Wall street and the railroads, but the indications are that the people are coming in for their inning, and that Wall street and the railroads will not cut so wide a swath in national politics and national elections as in the past. By many, Hughes was picked as the winner in next year's race for the presidential nomination, but his move of Tuesday will most certainly put him out of the running.

Time may prove that vetoing the two-cent fare bill was the proper thing to do, but it most certainly was an unpopular move.

What Others Say.

THE GREATER TAFT.

In discussing the contest between Foraker and Taft it is taken for granted that the rank and file of the republican party is not especially interested. At least it has not been interested to the extent that it has been doing a great deal of talking. The politicians have been the ones that have occupied the front of the stage, as they always do, and the rank and file have had little to say.

The whole contest between Taft and Foraker was gotten up by the politicians. Certainly Secretary Taft said nothing or did nothing to indicate that he was a candidate for the presidency. His "boom" was launched while he was not even in the United States. It has been understood for a time that he would be a candidate at the proper moment, but so far as stirring up any local contest is concerned, he has had no hand in it.

But a contest was stirred up just the same. It became evident that he could have the united delegation from this state without the consent of the Foraker people. And without a united delegation at the national convention his chances of being nominated would be lessened. It therefore seemed that when the peace pact was proposed by George B. Cox that Taft and his followers would gladly jump at the bait.

And many of his followers did jump. They swallowed it hook and all. From one end of the state to the other it was proclaimed that everything was settled; that peace and harmony would henceforth reign. But all of us seem to have underrated Taft. Verily, he was the Greater Taft—greater than his followers, greater than the politicians. He would have no compromise. He would let those who formerly opposed him do their worst. He would throw down the glove and let them do as they pleased. From Washington comes the statement that he will not endorse the candidacy of Foraker for the senate in order to get the solid delegation from his state. It was a master stroke of politics, too, and it puts the Foraker people on the defensive in a way they have not heretofore been.

And look at the difference between Taft and the truckling politicians. Every one of them was willing to compromise with the Dick organization. They literally fell over themselves to get to the peace conference. They heralded the words of Boss Cox as a philosophy that was to save the republican party. And what was the philosophy of Cox? Hold on to the offices.

Any kind of a sacrifice was to be made in principle rather than to let the offices get away. Whether Taft was wrong or right in his contentions made no difference.

Whether Foraker was wrong or right it was all the same. Whether Dick was a good senator or a bad senator—what booted it if a compromise could be fixed up that would insure the holding of the folder? But Taft says "No!" He believed when he made the Akron speech that George B. Cox and his gang was a menace to good government. He still believes so.

He believed when Foraker opposed certain measures in the senate that he was wrong and he still believes so, and not for the sake of a state delegation will he endorse the man whom he believes stands in the way of accomplishing that which Taft believes should be accomplished. Back to the chuck holes with the people who would tempt him.

The effect of the Taft statement as it appears at this time will be to make him a formidable candidate for the republican nomination—a much more formidable candidate than he has ever been. It will not make so much difference now whether he receives the solid delegation from Ohio. Every man in the convention will know that he could have had it if he had compromised. Every republican in the United States will know why he does not have back of him his home state, and it will make him stronger in all the other states. Today it looks as if Taft could be nominated whether he had a single delegate from Ohio.

As for Foraker's candidacy—it is still a long time until a senator is to be chosen. Today he has the worst of it. Dick is now an incumbent; George B. Cox's advice to the republicans will hunt Foraker like a nightmare and poison the air for him. Whether the statement was or was not made with Foraker's advice will make no difference. He will be accused of being back of Cox anyway, and he will have the fight of his life to throw off the odium. His own statement that he would no longer oppose Taft will sound like a mockery.

But Foraker is a giant among giants—a very whirlwind of a combatant, successful as the wildest diplomat. He is not going to lay down. He is not whipped, however badly he may be punished by the time, Taft has won a thousand points by his statement, but he has not as yet eliminated Foraker. Indeed, if Foraker could shake off Dick and the rest of the politicians and go straight to the people and make a series of typical Foraker speeches, there is no telling what might happen. But Dick and the gang that surrounds him is a mighty weight for anybody to carry.—Springfield (Ohio) News.

HOSTILITIES RENEWED IN CENTRAL AMERICA

Nicaraguans and Salvadoreans Capture the Port Acajutia—It is Believed That President Zelaya has Declared War Against Guatemala.

Mexico City, Mex., June 12.—Hostilities have broken out in Central America. A force of Nicaraguans, assisted by Salvadorean revolutionists, captured the port of Acajutia, Salvador.

This startling news came to the capital last evening in the shape of a telegram from President Figueroa to the Salvadorean minister to Mexico, Manuel Delgado.

The minister is now closeted with President Diaz. The Nicaraguans on board the gun boat Montombo, bombarded the fort and then landed troops. The town is now in the hands of the Nicaraguan general Manuel Rivas. Intense excitement prevails. It is believed the objective point of the expedition is the port of San Jose de Guatemala, and that President Zelaya of Nicaragua has declared war against Guatemala.

ABE HUMMEL, WHO IS IN JAIL.

After a legal fight of more than a year Abraham Hummel, the disbarred New York lawyer, finally has entered the city penitentiary on Blackwell's island to serve his term of one year on conviction of conspiracy to manufacture evidence in the Dodge-Morse divorce case. The prisoner is the surviving prominent member of the old firm of Howe & Hummel, which for many years was prominent in the handling of litigation of a shady character, chiefly in the divorce courts. The senior partner, William F. Howe, died several years ago.

AMIDST APPLAUSE

Member of Royal Party Dies at a Theatre Party in London.

London, June 12.—While King Edward and Queen Alexandra were in attendance last night at a gala performance of the opera, with the King and Queen of Denmark as their guests, Major General Sir Arthur E. Ellis, extra equerry to the king, died suddenly during the performance.

There was no premonition of his seizure. He and Lady Ellis were chatting with Sir Frederick Treves and other friends when the general gripped his throat and fell back in his chair unconscious. Aid was promptly rendered by Sir Frederick and other distinguished physicians present, but the death of the general was practically instantaneous.

The dramatic side of the picture was increased by the fact that Gen. Ellis died while the cheers announcing the arrival of the two royal couples were ringing in the auditorium and re-echoing from the street. King Edward was not informed of the death until after the performance which was not interrupted by the tragic incident.

TWO WOMEN KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Indianapolis, Ind., June 11.—Two women are dead and three other persons seriously hurt as the result of an automobile accident in the northern part of the city last evening.

A trolley car struck and wrecked J. F. Hime's machine.

The dead: Mrs. Thomas W. Love, aged fifty-eight, Indianapolis; Mrs. Emma Gordon, aged seventy-two, Indianapolis.

Seriously injured, J. F. Himes of Broad Ripple, a suburb of Indianapolis; Miss Fay Himes, his daughter; Mrs. B. Keiser, Indianapolis. The accident happened on the Indiana Union Traction line at 38th-st. and College-av. According to Himes he slackened speed to allow a north-bound car to pass, then drove onto the double track and crashed into a south-bound car.

POLICE GET CLEW TO FURNACE MYSTERY

Cincinnati, O., June 12.—The police have in custody a twelve-year-old boy, Ed. Nagel, homeless, whose confession will cause the arrest of two men on suspicion of having murdered the unknown man whose partially consumed body was found in a furnace at the Ryan Soap works about ten days ago.

The boys says he lived with the two men several days and heard them tell of the murder, also that he saw a pool of blood where the murder was committed.

The coroner returned a verdict of murder in the case, although the police have all along held to the theory of suicide. In order to commit suicide the man would have to crawl through an opening 16x22 inches into a seething mass of fire.

Every Man His Own Doctor

The average man cannot afford to employ a physician for every slight ailment or injury that may occur in his family, nor can he afford to neglect them, as so slight an injury as the scratch of a pin has been known to cause the loss of a limb. Hence, every man must from necessity be his own doctor for this class of ailments. Success often depends upon prompt treatment, which can only be had when suitable medicines are kept at hand. Chamberlain's Remedies have been in the market for many years and enjoy a good reputation. They sell for 25 cents a bottle.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints.

CELTIC TONGUE IS DYING.

Preserved from Extinction Only by Efforts of Patriotic Societies.

Reports from Wales foreshadow the passing of the sole Celtic tongue which has survived the twentieth century without the entire loss of its ancient birthright.

Gaelic is well-nigh gone from the Highlands and in Ireland it is preserved from extinction only by the efforts of patriotic societies. Cornish died in 1770 with the venerable Mrs. Drenth, who alone could speak it. Welsh has remained the native speech of a considerable community and the Eldestidid has kept alive traditions of the bards and rhapsodists.

But the dry rot is at work. According to the testimony of Welsh clergymen before the Westminster church commission English is fast replacing Welsh as the habitual speech of the children of Cardiff. All through South Wales a similar tendency of the young to abandon the parental speech is noted. In the parish of the vicar of Trellech, numbering 772 souls, only three aged persons speak the old vernacular. When the children give up a language it is doomed.

The passing of Welsh is merely an episode in a story of linguistic "degeneration and dissolution" which is one of the extraordinary things of history. Though the Celts have at all times stamped the impress of a vigorous personality on the world's politics, though they remain one of its prominent peoples, with the extinction of Welsh no living language worthy of the name will exist as a monument to them.

They were the first to leave the old Aryan home to invade Europe; they overran it from Russia to the Irish lakes; they established nations in France, Spain, Italy, Bohemia and Britain; they created great literatures but when conquered themselves, they have invariably accepted the language of their conquerors as their own.

SERVANT PROBLEM IN CUBA.

Cook is in Sole Charge of the Domestic Cuisine.

The Cuban matron has little to say in the management of her own household, as the family literally board with their cook, who has sole control of the cuisine. When a cook is engaged she is paid so much per month—$10, $15 or $20, as the case may be—for her work. She at once inquires how much is allowed for the marketing, which she is to do each morning. On being told, she figures out how much she can save from the amount, and if the graft amount to say 15 or 20 cents per day, she is likely to accept the position. She rarely sleeps at the house, and usually has a family of her own who are fed from the larder of her employer. Early breakfast is light—fruit, rolls and coffee—and at noon there is a meal known as late breakfast, which resembles the American luncheon. When this is finished the cook spends a few hours at her home and returns at five o'clock in time to prepare dinner. A half-grown girl is employed to wait on the table, answer the door bell, etc. In some families male cooks are employed. If the meals do not suit the master of the house he adds more money to the marketing allowance.—Mrs. C. R. Miller, in Leslie's Weekly.
